SAVING TREES BY GRAFTING

Injured Parts Are Bridged by Means of Scions of Last Year's Growth—Plan Outlined.

Orchard trees which have been girdled may often be saved by what is called bridge grafting. This consists in bridging the injured parts by means of scions of the last season's growth, thus connecting the part below the wound with that above. First trim the bark around the injured parts. Then sharpen the ends of the scions to a wedge shape and fit tightly into the layer of new wood just beneath the bark, called the cambium layer. Cover the union at the end of the scions with grafting wax, completely to exclude the air. Also wrap the wound with cloth to protect it from drying out, likewise cover the wax with old muslin to keep it from being melted by the sun. If the lower edge of the wound is near enough to the ground to make it practicable to do so, it is better to cover it three or four inches deep with fresh earth.

Where the trees are very young and the girdling is severe, cutting the trunk off below the wound is probably the best treatment. The exposed part of the stub should at once be coated with grafting wax. Select the best sprout that starts and support it by tying it to a firm stake until it is stocky enough to withstand strong winds without danger of being broken off. When the sprout is well started dress the stump so that it may heal over readily. Cut the stub slanting at the base of the sprout so that it will shed water. Then cover the wound with paint made of pure white lead and raw linseed oil, to protect it from water and from disease germs. Do not spread the paint beyond the cut surface. This method should produce a tree of bearing age sooner than one could be grown from a replanted nursery tree.

To make grafting wax, melt together four parts, by weight, of resin, two parts of beeswax, and one part of beef tallow or raw linseed oil. Apply while moderately hot with a brush or dauber. A supply of the wax may be kept on hand by taking the mixture when hot and pouring it into water. When it is sufficiently cool, work with the hands until the mass assumes a buff color. Make into balls and wrap with waxed paper to prevent the balls from sticking together.

HOW TO PLANT STRAWBERRY

Best to Have Plants in Bucket Containing Water to Keep Roots in a Moist Condition.

One of the best methods of planting strawberries is to thrust a spade straight into the ground at the proper place to a depth of five or six inches, writes R. S. Sando in Outing, and then lean it over to one side, forcing the soil out of the way and leaving a wedge shaped hole, one wall of which is straight up and down. The roots of the plant should be spread out in a fan shape against this wall and the spade, then set in the ground about six inches farther forward, and by a backward movement of the handle firmly press the dirt against the roots of the plant. To lend additional firmness to the soil, step with one foot on either side of the plant.

The last hole made by the spade should have some soil raked into it before leaving. When setting the plants it is best to have them in a bucket containing a little water in order that the roots may be kept moist until they are planted; but it is not necessary or advisable to water plants immediately after setting them.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

Keep the weeds out of the orchard. Fire blight attacks the pear, quince and apple.

Thinning fruit usually pays, grading fruit always does.

Put on an old mitten and get after the tent caterpillars.

Raspberries should be picked when they have turned red.

There is not a home that can afford to be without blackberries.

In growing dewberries on a large scale one of the serious problems is that of securing pickers.

As a crop for the young orchard beans come as near being the ideal as anything that can be grown.

To watch the trees and vines grow that one has planted, to provide bowers as well as fruit, is a pleasing ambition.

Get the blackberries out of the sun as soon as they are picked, or they are likely to turn red in spots and be less salable.

Leave plenty of mulch between the strawberry rows when uncovering. It helps to retain moisture, and keeps berries cleaner.

Dig out and burn blackberry or blackcap plants that are infested with red rust. There's no other way to fight this disease.

HIS PREFERENCE FOR HOME

Oliver Wendell Holmes Unable to Get Any Real Pleasure in the Vaunted "Tavern."

Don't talk to me about taverns! There is just one genuine, clean, decent, palatable thing occasionally to be had in them—namely, a boiled egg. The soups taste pretty good sometimes, but their sources are involved in a darker mystery than that of the Nile. Omelette taste as if they had been carried in the waiter's hat, or fried in an old boot. I ordered scrambled eggs one day. It must be that they had been scrambled for by somebody, but who—who in the possession of a sound reason could have scrambled for what I had set before me under that name? Butter! I am wondering why the taverns always keep it until it is old. Fool that I am! As if the taverns did not know that if it was good it would be eaten, which is not what they want. Then the waiters, with their napkins—what don't they do with those napkins! Mention any one thing of which you think you can say with truth, "That they do not do."

Every six months a tavern should burn to the ground, with all its traps, its "properties," its beds and pots and kettles and start afresh from its ashes like John Phoenix-Squibb.

No; give me home, or a home like mine, where all is clean and sweet, where coffee has pre-existed in the berry and tea has still faint recollections of the pigstails that dangled above the plant from which it was picked, where butter has not the prevailing character which Pope assigned to Denham, where soup could look you in the face if it had "eyes" (which it has not), and where the comely Anne or the gracious Margaret takes the place of these napkin bearing animals—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

DISSOLVE BONE IN THROAT

Use of Lemon Juice at Critical Time Is a Thing Worth Keeping in Mind.

Sitting at a planked shad dinner in Yonkers, a laughing guest drew a bone into his throat and he began to strangle. Some one suggested that the sufferer swallow a fragment of dry bread.

"Oh, no," exclaimed an Ossining man. "Don't give him bread. It might catch the bone and it might not. Give him something that is sure to give relief." Beckoning to a waiter, he said: "Bring me a lemon, cut in two." And it was brought without delay. Taking one section, he offered it to the choking guest and told him to suck the juice and to swallow it slowly. Directions were faithfully followed, and in about a quarter of a minute the afflicted one placed the half lemon on his plate, looked into the anxious faces around the table and smiled.

"Well, Joe," said one, "how about it?"

"It's gone," was the reply, "the bone has slipped down."

"Not exactly that," said the Ossining man. "The bone slipped down, all right, but it was melted first by the citric acid. I never knew it to fail to dissolve a fishbone. You can test the power of lemon juice by dropping some on the fishbones you may have lying on your plate."

Several diners tried the experiment. In each case the acid reduced the bone to liquid gelatine.

Fawn and St. Bernard as Companions.

At the little village of Bauma, in Switzerland, a farmer recently found a young fawn in one of his fields.

Fearing that if left alone without its mother some mischief would befall it, he took it home and did everything possible for it. Now, he happened to have a large St. Bernard dog, and this dog and the fawn took to each other.

The fawn slept in the dog's kennel, and when it grew a little older and went out on its walks abroad, the dog accompanied it, and defended it against the attacks of other dogs.

Sometimes the St. Bernard and the fawn would be absent in the woods and fields for a whole day, but they always returned at night, the doors and gate being left open for them. The fawn is now much taller than the St. Bernard, and yet the dog still goes out with it.

Praise Be, the Brother Was Lying.

Police courts are not always marked by an atmosphere of piety, but the exception to the rule occurred in a court where a very religious man, against whom one of the neighbors had made a complaint, was being tried for some trivial offense. The complaining witness was called to the stand to relate his side of the story, and the defendant listened closely for several minutes. Then his personal feelings overrode court etiquette and he rushed up to the judge, fervently exclaiming: "Your honor, the brother is lying. Praise the Lord!"

Limit of the Borrowing Habit.

Little Margie was a frequent visitor at the Jones home, going there on errands of borrowing many things each day. On this occasion she asked the loan of a cooking utensil. But Mrs. Jones had become very much out of patience at the continual borrowing and sent word by Margie that she "had other fish to fry."

Imagine her surprise when in a few moments her neighbor's little Margie again appeared in her doorway, bringing:

"Mozzer, thaid pleathe to t'end 'Ahome of the fish pleathe."
